

Special Volunteer Needed:

George Washington Birthplace National Monument is looking for a self-motivated, mature volunteer to start handling two young calves to prepare them to be the park's next ox team. Experience with cattle is helpful, but a willingness to learn, a commitment to safety, a respect for animals and to a desire to preserve a dying craft are essential. Hours are flexible, but a commitment to come to the park at least three times a week to interact with the calves is preferable.
